React 16.5 adds support for a new DevTools profiler plugin. This plugin uses React's experimental Profiler API to collect timing information about each component that's rendered in order to identify performance bottlenecks in React applications. It will be fully compatible with our upcoming time slicing and suspense features.